UK Outlook for Tuesday 9 Nov 2021 to Thursday 18 Nov 2021:
Areas of low pressure lying to the north or northwest of the UK will bring changeable autumnal conditions at the start of the period, with active rain bands travelling across the UK, followed by showers and drier interludes, with occasional strong winds. Likely to be wettest with stronger winds in the northwest, whereas the driest and brightest weather is likely to be in the southeast where rain bands will often be weak. There is an increased chance of wintry showers from the north and northwest towards the end of the period, initially over higher ground but also a risk they will occur at lower levels. Temperatures generally around average throughout this period, although milder interludes more prevalent at first, and colder interludes increasing possible later on.
